ety has a brief article on "The Medicinal EG e to of Laziness," which contains much comon sense and philosophy, and is perhaps quite applicable to this meridian as to that for bich it was written. We have people enough ere who are naturally and inenrably lazy, to e sure, but these are not the ones for whom he prescription is intended. To be lazy on kinds-a remedy, in his estimation, a thousand times more efficacious than those by which overworked humanity usually seeks to recruit is forces. Even in our recreation we work too inch. The man who has a mouth to spare om business is apt to spend it in sight-seeing much in a given time for pleasure as in a given ime for work. He must extend his knowledge n some new direction: he must spend his time perfect some invention for which his business ife gives him no time. As to being laze, he even then it would take him a long while to be o this submission, and instead of the inanition dreads, what unexpected gain does he not find? Whoever has passed through a season of proed abstinence from accustomed work needs no assurance of its nitimate benefits. I is when the ground lies fallow, seemingly barren and naciose, that it is gathering its richest ources of after-fruitfulness; the surest strong in fluences that shall smile in future harvests, which else could not have been. If we look closely, we shall discover that we owe many of our best aud mer et euccessful deeds to some impulse or ang ng for it: when our minds were rather recepve than active. "To the lazy," says the writer f the article to which we have alluded, "are ouchsafed revelations which are withheld from the busy and the laborious." Many discoveries in science and art that are called accidental, are the result of temporary laziness, freedom rem absorbing care, or special endeavor. Some never grasp, and they are among our best; it may be humbling, but it is true.

One writer would have a clear distinction nade between laziness and idleuess. "The man much be may be entitled to his relaxation, still sees within the recesses of his own mini the mute, half-reproachful phautoms of the work he has abauconed. If his idlences be compuiary idleuesa, of course the care is still more To be truly lazy the patient must have no sense of obligations upon him, either present or future: he must not only have made up his mind to do nothing but must have forgotten for the moment that there is anything anywhere to be icne. It is not an uncommon thing to hear men say that they are never quite well when they are idle; that they feel indigestion, headache, loss of appetite, languor, and what uot. This is because they are only idle, not lazy. Their brains and their hands have ceased to work, but no moral change has come over hem. The idlenes in which most men induige s but a temporary change of habits. The idteees which is laziness involves a change of The writer touches the root of the matter when he speaks of the moral quality of laziness To be lazy when one knows he ought to work s really more exhausting than to work, for real est lice always in the line of duty. But when dnty bids to cease from work, to lay aside for e yearly vacation or the evening hour the at xicties, the hopes, the vexations of working time, what happiness, what fature gain might acquieccence bring us. "The flashes of self-anowledge which dart across his mind at such nomente may change a man's career. He may se the folly of his past life, the wisdom of ast resolutions which he has not had the contancy to keep, or the absurdity of ambitious dreams which till theu had been his master. Or he may, on the other hand, derive new cour. ge from the retrospect; may learn to say to hir self with renewed confidence: 'this right and bas done so much hitherto by the sheer force of will, and unswerving setf-reliauce; wh should I faint or look back now?" Wherefore let those who are suffering en arced withdrawal from their chosen activities comforted; those who are anxious and roulled about many things be warned, and those who are indolent by nature or habit be

The London Weekly Review strikes severely at the English railway management as follows:

The truth is that railway traveling, with its noise, its melle, and its prossic bustle is irk-some to most people, and we have contrived in merry England to make it a perfect unisance to the very class of passengers by whom railways are chiefly supported. In what country but this would the public have had to wait vears and tene of years for a means of communication with the railway guard, when it is openly known that the want of such communication may at any time, usy, frequently does, imperil life and property? In what country but this would men consent to be huddled together in a dirty sheep-pen, without a cushion to sit on, and with window frames which rattle in their grooves until every passenger is coalesed by the uoise? In what country but this would the public encounter such risks, endure such unpunctuality, put up with such bad accommodation, and pay for all this such exortiant farce? The cost of railway traveling in Eagland exceeds considerably what is paid in at the English raiiway mauagement as follows: parge what do we gain? Certainly not com-ort, for, with all our British notious of the ly to fight for what they deemed the canac of the Sonth, I said to them with their muskets ou their shoulders: "Remember, my children, you go into organized military commands, with no power on my part to afford you promotion; for, if it cost me my life, and the life of every member of my household, I will not seek favors of a Government that, if left to me, would never have existed." What results could to me have afforded compensation for what I have lost? The wealth of the world, if coined into diamond, would be as nothing to soothe the griefs. I bear about me. How can I recur to the horrid past but with feelings of undying regret, of endless condemnation?

Fulcgies have been expended upon the extinct Confederacy. It has gone, and with it has gone the miserable act of coaseription that nuthlessly tore from the hearth stone the vouth of the Sonth, and dragged them to bloody selds, and deprived them of their young lives. With it, thank Heaven! have died its infamons laws of impressment that seized the hard earnings of houest industry, that plundered the people's barns, deprived them of their grain, and gave them worthless paper lu exchauge. I am not revengeful Whatever wrongs I have suffered by the mad folly of others I will try to first. There are those prominent in this work of destruction that I know will have the magnanimity to acknowledge themselves indebted formy kindress. on the Continent. Even the shareholders do not appear to reap any advantage from high fares, and many lines in France and Pruseia are, on an average, more remnnerative, in a commercial sease, than our own. Speed, certainly, we can insure ou most long journeys; but if it can be only insured by a corresponding sacrifice of personal safety, it can be hardly called a recommendation. We stand, in short, in the remarkable position of having been the first nation to adopt railroads for locomotion and the last to promote their improvement.

FREMALLY AND THEIR FARMER OFFICE The Memphis Bulletin says that Mr. Sykes, in his speech at the Exchange Building on Satur day night, in that city, stated that during the ast five months he had seen much of the operations of the new system of labor lu Tennessee and States South of it. He declared his deliberate conviction, formed from personal obse ration, that the best friends of the negroes were their former owners; that they were more kindly in their lauguage and conduct, gave for their wants than all others. Such is the encurrent testimony of impartial observers who inhabit or have visited Southern States during the last five or six months. We could tive many lilustrations of the truthfulaess of Mr. Sykes's statements. From a letter before us we make this extract. It was written in

Lowndes county, Mississippi:

The fermer owner of some negroes, Mr.——, had a mut to leave him without any cause out go cd in search of a new home to a neighboring tewn, as is too much the case with the negrees for their own good. He had been there only a few mouths, when he was taken sick and cled for want of attention. The farmer knew nothing of his sickness until he was dead. The negro had no money with which to pay the extense of his burief. His family applied to his farmer owner for assistance, and, although the negro had left him, without provocation or excue, he furnished the means of a decent burial. In another case a negro girl, aged about fonteen, left the plantation of her former owner, end went in quest of better wages. She, after having been gone about two months, returned to her old home, her health broken by disease contracted in her absence, without a cent of money and almost destitute of clothing. Her fermer owner took her back, although ehe could raiv be an expense, and he now supports her without any hope of remuneration so long as the may live. In many instances abic-bodied in grees abandon wives and children and go off in search of new employers, leaving their families to be taken care of by their former owners, which they are doing. The Southern States are full of such examples, all teading to show that the best and truest friend of the negro with a few exceptions, is his former owner. All ascertions to the contrary are unfounded, and are calculated, if not designed, todo injury. The sooner the negro is convinced that he enger better wages from, and he more kindly seated by his former owner than by other parces, the better it will be for both races. A GREAT SPEECH -The ringing of sunn (From the New York World metal was lately heard in the Georgia State THE ENFORCING CLAUSE OF THE CO STITUTIONAL AMENDMENT. Convention, assembled at Miliedgeville. If force is used, he can act in justifiable self-defease, even to the extent of maining or killing his oppressor; while the person attempting to extert service is liable for trespase and indictable for a felont.

This amendment, as soon as adopted, works the immediate repeal of all Saide laws for enfercing involuntary servitude. It will be "the supreme law of the land," and the judges in corry State shall be bund thereby, anything in the Constitution or law of any State to the centrary notwithstanding." (C. S. Constitution, Art. VI.) If a person under no contract for service runs away, there will be no means of recovering him except hy violence, rendering its perpetrator liable to punishment; while the person whose freedom is attempted may resist, even to the taking of life, with imponity. Hence, as we have said, this amendment of the Constitution will excent estable. the most important measures we have considered. It is for this reason that I object in sending an address informing the President of on and address informing the President of our meritorious deeds, to omitting this.

I am not responsible for the wide range this debate has taken. I would have limited it strictly to the immediate object I had in view; but it has suited the gentleman from Ballwin (Mr. Kenan) to bring in topics foreign and exciting, and not germain to the question before us. When he presents an issue that, I feel, relects upon nie, I cannot decline my own defense. He has enlegized the galiant deeds of Southern heroes and rejoiced at his own devotion to the late Confederacy. It is far from my feeling or purpose to depreciate the hard-carned faurels of the brave, no matter in what canse obtained. While I cannot boast, as others may, of deeds of arms on ensanguined fields, I can all rd to do justice to the valor and caring of those whose fortunes led them to battle. I never professed, because I never felt it, devotion to the ill-starred Confederacy. I regarded it from the first with open disfavor, and never abated my disapproval of its insane origin. Without attacking the personal motives of the men who luangnated secession (for amorg them were many that I numbered outstitution will execute itself.

Never during the bloody progress of the unfortunate strife that followed lise enactments was there a day that I would not, had I possessed the power, have ar-rested the horrible revolution; and I appeal to the gentleman from Buldwin, who tells us he, , was a L'aion man in that nnha We are now ready to examine the recen wrought our ruin as a people, if he, had he pos served the power of au autocrat, would no have arrested in its mad career the crnei, relent me mourn the unhallowed and damning act. As no objection of taking and the Except an apprehension that Congress might, under the record section of that are not sent, claim the right a tacklate for the negro after slavery was abolished. To this Mr. Seward replied:

Governor Perry states, in his message, that Governor Perry states, in his message, that the President and the Attorney-General of the United States concur in the opinion that the apprehensions he had expressed as to the power conferred in the second clause were without foundation. The rebukeful denial, and peculiar reason for it, given by Mr. Saward, challence particular attention.

The severity of this blunt rebuke falls with createst weight upon the Northern sticklers for the repudiated interpretation, such as Senator Wilson and the New York Tribune. It is perfectly natural that Southern people should feel some apprehensions when prominent Republican leaders chain that the amendment comers sweeping powers to legislate for the negro. The ressen assigned by Mr. Seward for denouncing this interpretation as "quernious and ne mourn the unhallowed and damning act, thought and I said that the material interests cor people, and especially the cherished in itntion of slavery, withdrawn as it was from is sacient protector, the Constitution of the United States, the only power by which it could have been pre-saved or perpetuated, were by one fell swoop destroyed and lost forever. What same u ind could see safety and prosperity whise said it in count see safely and prosperity in a country surrounded on three sides as with a cordon of arowed adversaries, and with its ocean front making a circuit of more thin 5,000 miles of exposed border? This, of itself, were enough to mark the measure as one of in-

The rease'u assigned by Mr. Seward for de-nouncing this interpretation as 'quentious and unreasonable, 'looke like a paradox. How can a clause which purports to confer powers be, as Mr. Seward declares, 'really restraining in its effects, instead of enlarging the power of Con-gres?' This is certainly a paradox; and we are left to conjecture how Mr. Seward would explain it. We suppose he would contend that, without the second clause, Congress could eu-force the abolition of slavery on the prin-ciple that the end being given the means for its attainment are necessarily given with it. Con-gress could, therefore, legislate without the second section, and without it would have an unlimited discretion in the choice of means. But the effect of the added clause is to restrain legislation to means which are "appropriate" I recall an interview with Com. Blake, of the American navy, who had surveyed his country's cosst, and whose maps and fliustrations are part of his country's history, in which, in my selicitude on this subject, I asked of him the favor to inform me of the extent of crast from the mouth of the Potomac river to the Rio Grande; and, as I now remember, taking a pair of dividers and a scale, he gave me the result, and it was more than 2,000 miles. In my mind, I then ascended the Potomac to its passage through the monntains; thence west ou the creat of the Alleghenies to its termination; thence to El Paso and down the Rio Grande to the guif, and contemplated, in all the macritude, the frontier to be gnarded. Without arrogating any superior wisdom to myself, had others paused to consider this and other insurmountable difficulties that loomed up like mountain summits, this deplorable, miserable, ill-conceived, unjustifiable, self-destroying revolution could never have had existence. From it sprung the Confederacy. I could not and did not rejoics at settly plain language have a trickish look; it ilways better to avoid them. The added se-ion is a part of the amendment, and must be the protection of the second second second second terpreted according to the fair meaning of it non whether they are adapted to the end as fectually accomplish it. The single thin bich the amendment in question authorize tude. The simplest, and therefore most appropriate means of Joing this is to make attempts to extort such service a penal offeuse. Chief Justice Marshait, in a celebrated case, laid down this principle: "Should Congress, luthe execution of its powers, adopt measures which are prohibited by the Constitution: or should Congress, under the pretext of executing its powers, pass laws for the accomplishment of objects not instrusted to the Government, it would become the painful duty of this tribunal, should a case requiring such a decision come before it, to say that such an act was not the law of the land." The regulation of personal rights within a State is "an object not intrusted to the Government," and Congress has no right to attempt it under the color of the proposed amendment. It is nriged that the possession of the elective frauchise would effectually protect the nezroes against slavery but Congress, in attempting to confer it, would clearly overleap the boundaries of its authority; and without any color of necessity, since the simple purishment of attempts to enslave would completely execute the power conferred by the amendment.

But the Tribune holds a different doctring.

But the Tribune holds a different doctrine

It defends the apprehensions of Governor Perragainst the rebulge of Mr. Seward, and contend that the added section of the amendment goe quite beyond the mere abolition of slavery Here is a part of what it says:

The Convention will excuse me if I have tres-passed on its patience in giving utterance to this feeble expression of my feelings and opinions. I cannot add any new reason to opinions. I cannot add any uew reason to what I, on a former occasion, have nrged why I desire reference made in this address of the convention to the President of the United States, to our action of to day, annulling the war debt. I do not say public debt, for I choose to distinguish between the legal obligations of the State incurred before the war, and thattroursed after, independent and irrespective of its prosecution, and the mountain of debt imposed on the people as the result of secession. THAT SECOND CLAUSE OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL DMENT -Our radical neighbor of the Dem ocrat is greatly elated with the thought that his adical brother of the New York Tribune agrees with him in his construction of that famous second clause of the Constitutional Amendment He prints the Tribune's article and chuckles over it beautifully. Well, there is high authority for saying that it is a good and pleasant thing for brethren to dwell together in unity. through the canvass preceding our election in Maxico; and with him agree sundry other people. nd clause of the amendment confers upon Congreet the power to do almost anything and every which that body might be disposed to do Out of the simple words, "Congress shall have ower to enforce this article by appropriate gislation," the Democrat conjured up all sorts dance into the resime of imagination for the purpose of scaring its readers with the frightfu ge Congress would and could rightfully do under the authority of the clause in question in ase it should become a part of the organic iaw

We found it necessary to dissipate these airy aothings of our neighbor, and to show that the clause confers no more power upon Congress tution oc it now exists.

The discussion has been taken up by the New apparently taking it-for its words are vaguethat the second clause enlarges the power of did. The World, we hardly need eay, is the leading Democratic paper of New York. It is but fair to say that the Tribune does not go half as far into the domains of radicalism upon this question as the Louisville Democrat The Tribune does not, as the Democrat did, declare that the second clause confers power upon Congress to give the right of ter it will probably be for all parties. voting to negroes. The Tribune would hardly ock the common sense of the country by indorring such an absurdity. It merely says this: "It is certain that section was intended by its movers, by the two Honses of Congress which adopted it, to confer upon Congress full power to secure real as well as nominal freedom the slaves." What the Tribune means by this is not clear. It may indicate an absurdity or it may not. The public will thus perceive which is the mage to the Legislature of that State on the ocsion of its special session, says: "The subject of suffrage is, by the national Constitution, expressly referred to the determination of the eral States, and it cannot be taken from them without a violation of the letter and spirit of that instrument. But, without stopping to discuss theories or questions of constitutional jaw, and leaving them out of view, it would, in my opinion, be unwise to make the work of reruction depend upon a condition of such ubtful utility as negro suffrage. It is a fact so manifest that it should not be called in question by any that a people who are just emerging from the barbarism of slavery are not nalified to become a part of our political system, and take part not only in the government of themselves and their ors, but of the whole United States. So far from believing that negro suffrage is a whether it is a remedy for any, and rather believe that its enforcement by Congress would be more likely to subject the negro to a merciless persecution than to confer upon him any substantial benefit. By some it is thought that uffrage is already cheap enough in this country; and the immediate transfer of more than a nali million of men from the bonds of slavery, with all the ignorance and degradation upon them which the slavery of generations upon Southern fields has produced, would be a decla ration to the world that the exercise of Ameri malifications, and that there is no difference tween an American freeman and an American clave which may not be removed by a mere act of Congress."

The general impression prevails that the reach Government has been warned not to end any more troops to Mexico.

From all this chaos of contradiction and uncertainty we shall ere long be delivered. Congress will soon be in session, and the President's message will be likely to afford the country a glimpse of the views which the Government entertains in respect to the condition and proschimerae dire, and went upon a witch's pects of this American "sick man," and whether we should turn good Samaritan and help doctor him or not. In the mean while, if Mr. Max would please

We occasionally get glimpses of the true stat of things in Mexico. We learn now and then more radical, the New York Tribune or the how much order there is, how much security, how much peace nuder the reign of this benign Austrian with his black flag and his bloody code. Here is a letter to the New Orleans Times. dated City of Mexico, Oct. 12th, which is inter I started on the 2d for the famous Cave of Cacainamilya, situated near Cuernavaca, with some eight friends and our attendants. We arrived there safely. Of the magnificence of this wonderful cave, I will give yon a description in a fintre letter. On our return we were persuaded, for our eatery, to join a detachment composed of Austriana, Belgiana, and natives in the Imperial service—in all about eighty men. accepted the appointment. He has accepted it at a serious eacrifice of what he regarded as his own political and personal interesta. His opinions in regard to affairs in the country to which he is commissioned, are known to our readers from his remarks which we published yesterday. They are decided and strong. Maxistream of the marks was terrific; not a sign yesterday. They are decided and strong. Maxistream of the marks was terrific; not a sign yesterday. yesterday. They are decided and strong. Maximilian may expel him or attempt to expel him from Mexico. Perhaps the usurper can expel him. We suppose he can just now. But it might be a dangerous proceeding.

But it will, as the Albany Evening Journal says, be a work of some difficulty for General Logan to find the Republican Court of Mexico. Beaten at nearly every point in its heroic struggles with the Imperialist invaders, it has become an itinerant, wandering affair. At last accounts its headquarters were in El Paso del Norte, from which point Juarez issued his orders and kept up the form of a government. But Maximilian assumes the Republic to be at an end, as is sufficiently indicated by his malignant order, in which he decrees the execu-pilon of the party had been felling stones, and by the time we and by the time we are surrounded to na. Whilst this took place, the privates of the party had been felling stones, and by the time we are surrounded to the provision of the party had been felling stones, and by the time we are surrounded to the provision of the party had been felling stones, and by the time we researed and her the time we constructed by his manufactured to the provision of the party had been felling stones, and the the subscience of the party had been felling stones, and the the subscience of the party had been felling stones, and the tendence was oppressive. an end, as is sufficiently indicated by his malignant order, in which he decrees the execution of all persons taken with arms in their hands, fighting against the Empire.

The assumption has been made that the Republican Administration will soon expire by limitation, as the term of Juarez is drawing to a close, and there is no possibility of electing his successor. This is a mistake as to fact. By constitutional provision, in an emergency of raises were returned to us. Whilst this took place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling place, the privates of the party had been felling tones and by the time we issued out, a complete barricade blocked up the road. All this time the dangerously near. Two and coeraionally a loud boom like the report of a mortar was heard dangerously near. Two a closes, and there is no possibility of electing his successor. This is a mistake as to fact. By constitutional provision, in an emergency of rialists in full retreat, reduced to two-thirds their number, but fighting gallaut-ly. As soon as they came in range our party of Liberals fired a voiley which killed some of their adversaries. The Austrian Captain now ordered his men to dismount. The Liberals behind him swarmed in the rocks, and in the roc a dense body of lances formed a mass of ste which tooked impassable. The Austrian orde Of course, by sending a Minister to the Republic of Mexico, our Government assumes that the Empire has no existence, and pronouncer in the most emphatic manner against the invasion by which Maximilian claims to have acquired the throne. In this, the Executive only gives emphasis to the declarations of Congress, affirming the Monroe doctrine, and expressing sympathy with our suffering neighbors. Whether Napoleon, the creator and director of the Austrian puppet, will interpret this action as a challenge and make it the protect for a diplomatic rupture, or will suffer Maximilian to take care of himself, is the interesting question now presented.

Those who have observed the progress of affairs for three years past, will remember that our Government has not at any time or under any circumstances, yielded the American position upon the question of European intervention in affairs upon this continent; nor has it even by implication admitted that an empire can exist in Mexico. That it did not protest against the French invasion, was due to the peculiar condition of our national affairs. Ite Of course, by sending a Minister to the Re-

Liberais, as they told me they had great difficulty procuring powder and percussion caps.

Col. Martinez, as soon as he heard who we were, and examined our passports, ordered our naconditional release. There was some difficulty about our arms, but we were privately informed we could have their value from his anbordinates, who paid at the rate of $32 in gold for Colt's revolvers; and two of our party, who had Sharpe's carbines, realized $50 apiece for toem. These and Colt's pistols are the favorite weapons with the Liberais, and Martinez has a body guard of twenty men armed with them.
I had a pair of ivory handled revolvers, which Col. Martinez offered to purchase from me. I handed them to him refusing all compensation, though he pressed me. We expressed some fear of going unarmed, but he offered an escort, and gave us a badge which would carry us safe to the Capital, saying, "No one will dare touch a hair of your heads."

Our servants all enlisted immediately with Martinez's troupe, and so did the native Im perfalists (who are all impressed men), and tour Belgians. All were immediately provided with tri-colored ribbons and incorporated.

we were hospitably treated to a rude meal of bread, cheese, and cold meat, washed down with strickless, and cold meat, washed down with aquadiente from Cuernavaca, and cool delicious water from a mountain stream. Toaste were drank to the United States, amidst cheers of "viva la libertad," death to the French and to Maximilian, afterward ending with a cheer to the Americaus.

We were now sent off, leaving the camp in motion, the prisoners on foot in the center of their captors. The native Mexican officers had their hands tied behind them, and a label on their bats with the word "traitor" on them. I fear their fate will be death, though Martinez promised us he would not shoot them.

We rode rapidly away, but about a league off were stopped by an officer and guard, and I was ordered to diamount, and my saddle was transferred to a beautiful black horse, while my indifferent one was carried off, the officer shouting to me—"In payment for your pistols."

We reached Mexico eafely next evening, and are expecting every moment to be imprisoned by the Imperial Government as spice, or charged with being disaffected to their rule. CORRESPONSAL

We published, two days ago, a letter from a gentleman who has recently been in Mexico, stating that the Liberals are no longer able to make any organized resistance to Maximilian's forces, and attempting to justify the Imperial order that all the Elberals taken shall be immediately executed. But the accounts from Mex ico are very contradictory. The latest is, that the Republicans are able to make an organized resistance and a very formidable one.

Our opinion still is, and we believe that the pinion of the Federal Government is, that, if the Imperial Government in Mexico works nnto understand, if he doesn't already, that the der the black flag, there will be and should be such an intervention on the part of the United Mexican affaire as he has, and that she has far States as will make the petty Mexican tyrani

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL -The case of Lieu lenant Miles H. Fenno, Fourth U. S. colored beavy artiliery, charged with aiding in the escape of Captain Hall, of the same regiment, was oncluded yesterday. The detense was argued by the prisoner, and the prosecution by Judge Advocate Thomson. The decision of the court is not yet divulged.

In the case of William Owens, company F Fourth colored heavy artiliery, charged wit desertion, the examination was closed. The soner, in the course of the defense, said that be was a green hand at soldiering, and didn't ert. The proceedings were forwarded to the Provost Marshal General. The case of James Thornton and fourteen o ers, of companies B and M. 12th U. S. colored eavy artillery, trie i for mutiny on the 29th o August last, is called for trial again on Saturda next. The above-named men mutinied at Fort Boyle, Kentucky, on the 4th day of August, and their behavior was of the most aggravated nature. Thornton and eight of his accompliced were found guilty and sentenced to be shot to death with mneketry; but the findings of the court were disapproved by Judge Advocate Gen eral Holt, on account of General Whitaker sitting as President of the commission part of day after his muster out of the service. The autineers have been held in confinement at the military prison of this post, for a new trial, by one of great importance, and the decision is anticipated with deep interest by the whole community, civil and military. General W. T. Ward and son, of the Louisville bar, are engaged for ptain J. W. Parker, 119th colored infantr n relieved from duty as a member of the military commission and court-martial, and joined his regiment.

THE FESTIVAL-No doubt many persons have cen two or more modest notices of the Fastival to be given on the 11th of December to the spacious town hall, and to be continued for five nights, in aid of the clergy of the South and their families, as well as giving some aid to the destitute parishes, to enable them to have houses of God in their midst; but few are aware that on the 18th of December, at the same place, a mueical solree, under the direction of one of our first performers, assisted by an able corps, interspersed with readings by two or more accomplished gentlemen, will be given and that during the week of the Festival there will be issued a daily paper, to be called the "Olive Branch," edited by an accomplished writer, and assisted by contributions, we trust rom some of the best anthors in the country, making it not only profitable, but fascination reading. The ladies bespeak from a generous and enlightened public its acceptance and hearty encouragement of these means in aid of a suffering people. Let each one respon a if a voice called on him for help, and we shall make the gift such a one as the people of the city may feel a just pride in sending to the ruffering South. Now is the time for action. If we fall now, how can we ever forgive our-"Act in the living present With heart within and God o'erhead."

THEOCGH TO NEW ORLEANS -The travelin public will be glad to learn that the Memphis and Charleston Railroad is again open for travel and that connections are made at Grand June tion with the road to New Orleans. Passengers leaving Louisville on the evening train take at Nashville the morning train for Decatur, over the Tennessee and Alabama Railroad, arriving at Decatur at 4 o'clock in the evening, and at Memphis the next morning at 9:40. Trains for New Orleans leave Grand Junction, on the and Charleston Railroad, Mondays, esdays, and Fridays, making the trip to New Orleans in thirty-two hours. Since the introduction of sleeping cars upon the Louis ville and Nashville and the Southern railroads, the passage to New Orleans is divested of all its ium and inconvenience. The route now open is a delightful one, and we expect to see it popularised as it never was before

HISTORY OF THE GREAT REBELLION -BY THOMAS P KETTRAL -An advertisement of this new and valuable work appears in our columns this morning. Jacques and Ros raiten each gave bail in the sum of $3,000 to appear and answer. Rebecca Dockens was ent to the City Hospital some time ago by the City Court, and has since made her escape. WOOD'S THEATER -The Minstrels had an ther densely crowded house last evening Everything passed off with the utmost hilarity Take the troupes of Sandford and Sharpely all in all, we do not believe they are equaled in his country. There is an originality and depth of humor in their facetia that would 'make a orse laugh," and their instrumental music is neurpeased for scientific and brilliant execu tion. They have some as eminent musicians as can be found anywhere. Frank Moran has been added to the galaxy. He made his first appearance last night, and fully sustained the high reputation be has won as Sandiord's pu-The programme for this evening contain nany new attractions.

The New Albany Commercial of yesterday says a rumor was published in the Ledger on Monday afternoon, that Mr. Henry Waring, pilot of the Tarascon, had disappeared and was supposed to be drowned. We should not have referred to it but for the neglect of our neighbor to give the proper explanation, and thus puict the apprehension excited. It had no good ndation, and should not have been made oublic. The fact is that Mr. W. and another pilot stepped off the boat on business, and she was pushed out and left them. This was immediately discovered, but the wag in command refused to land and left them to follow on an other boat shortly ofter. This they did, and were soon at their nost OATHOPADIC SURGERY .- Dr. Louis Bauer, of rooklyn, N. GENERAL COUNCIL .- The two Boards of the City Council will meet in regular session at heir Chamber, this evening. We hope they will take into serious consideration the res recommended to their notice by the Board of Health. Some encouragement is due to the lisinterested efforts of our physicians to bring about a sanitary reform. Members of Council, remember that whatever ill befalls the city on account of its uncleanliness will be greatly owing to your inaction. Can you bear the responsibility?

A petition has been circulating in Dan file for some days past, says the Gazette of Tuesday, asking the Postmaster-General to make arrangements for the mails for that place and points East and South of it, to be transported over the railroad from Louisville. hope this arrangement may be effected. It would be a great convenience to that community to have the Louisville mails four hours rarlier than at present. LOUISVILLE THEATER -Miss Ettle Henders will appear this evening as Widow Cheerly in the "Soldier's Daughter," and as Miss Thistledown and Maggie McFarlane in the "Bonnie Fishwife." These are both favorite plays, and should attract all lovers of the genteel drama. Mies Henderson's engagement so iar has bee ering success. A full house greeted he last night, and the plays were rendered with Le happiest effect.

DEATH OF ELIZABETH COSICE -The Cor resterday held an inquest upon the body of Elizabeth Cusick, who dted from injuries received at the hands of a man named O'Briant, everal days ago, as reported in the city p The wife of O'Briant was rearrested and lodged in jail by officer Giase. She will be tried as accessory to the murder.

RUN OVER -A little child was vesterdsy run ver by an express wagon on Market street, between Third and Fourth. We did not learn the extent of its injuries. The child was only three or four years old, and its parents resided at the house formerly occupied by Gross & Waller, we believe. Officer Shindler arrested and im RAILROAD COMMUNICATION BETWEEN VIR-GINIA AND THE WEST .- The Richmond Times save that "we now, for the first time, have reasonable hope of through communication being established at an early day between the South ern Atlantic seaboard and the teeming valies of the Mississippl. Not to the James River and Kanawha Cansi, nor yet to the Virginia Coutral Railroad, do we look to bring about this lesired consummation, though there can be no lonbt that both of these lines will be com pieted in the course of revolving years. The nportant link destined first to connect in the conds of commerce Virginia and her siste States of the West, is a line of railroad to be run westwardly from Bristol, Tennessee, through Cumberland Gap, styled the Cumberand Gap Railroad. The late war, which alon has prevented its completion, has also prevent ed its importance from rising into notice.

Hitherto and at present these counties have been forced by ab sence of communication to convert their super abundance of grain into stock, to be driven over a difficult country to distant markets. This road will put them within forty-eight hours of Richmond and Aiexandria. tractors, whose operations were stopped by the war, claim that their contracts are still valid, and are preparing to fulfili them; and it is confidently expected that the road will be completed in the course of the next two years. The mention of Aiexandria eminds us that energy and enterprise on the part of our merchants, and a liberal policy on the part of our Eastern railroads and the James iver canal, will be necessary to prevent the mmense trade to be opened up by this railroad rom being diverted northward from Lyuchourg. It would doubtless be absurdly prems nre to sgitate this subject at present, had our city not aiready during the brief period that has elapsed since the close of the war suffered heavily by the narrow policy of our public works connecting us with the West. We have seen freights from Baltimore destined for Southwestern Virginia carried by rail from Alexan dria to Lynchburg for less than they could be ansported by canal between Richmond and ynchburg. On Monday, November 6th, at Crooksville, in this county, William Young was tried by an examining court composed of Justices Ballew and Witt, for the killing of Thomas G. Maupin. The father and two brothers of Young were also arrested and tried at the same time. After the 4cstimeny for the State was through, the court released all of the parties except William Young, who did the shooting. The witnesses for the State were not present when Maupin was killed, but we understand that the testimetry showed that the killing was done in self-defense, and that Maupin was not shot until he had snapped his pistol at Young. This is a sad case, the parlies being brothers-in-law.

Killer — On the 7th instant, at Clay's Ferry, a discharged nero soldier named Arch, formerly the property of John W. Browning, of this county. Some months since Arch, at the head of a squad of negro soldiers visited this county, and during their stay committed several robberies and other outrages upon white citizens. He visited the residence of Mr. Robert Bntner, robbed him and grossly maitreated and insuited his wife. Mr. B.'s son, Lafayette, met him on the 7th, (as the boat landed this side of the river) in company with some five other discharged negro soldiers, all armed with pistois. Some words passed, and an altercation ensued. Arch, threw a rock at Bntner, and Butner it d his pletol, striking him in the region of the beart. Arch then, then clenched Bntner and threw him in the boat endeavoring all the while to wreuch the pistoi from his hand, and calling upon his courasdes to kill Butner. The Poet's Washington correspondent says that Congress will act upon the theory that the war is not ended. It is precisely the ground compled by the President and every one of the departments of the government.

The volunteers are not yet discharged, although they have repeatedly demanded their discharge in compilance with their terms of enlistment, and the invariable reply is that the war is hot yet closed.

The Treasury Department also holds in deference of the payment of bounties, that the war still exists. The President, while he practices the freedmen with the bayonet, does it under the theory that the war has not come to su end—that is, time enough has not elapsed to satisfy the President and Congress that the people of the South are steedfastly loyal.

The Matamoras Ranchero, Imperialist organ The Matamoras Ranchero, Imperialist organ, of the 25th ult. gives the following particulars of the Liberal attack and reputee at that place: At 5 o'clock this morning the ontlaws made an assault on the fortifications surrounding this city. They appeared at different points in small force, leaving it a matter of doubt whether an attack or a feint was intended. At length a charging party was formed to attack in earnest the artiflery picket at the southeast point of the city. The charging party made up in desperation what they tacked in numbers, and for a time the artiflery picket was forced back, leaving the gaus behind. At this juncture the guntime the atthicty picket was forced back, leaving the guus behind. At this juncture the guuscat Faisana, commanded by Anselmo and G. Gen. Mejia learning that a heavy assault was making on one of the forts, put himself at the head of 500 cavsiry and galloped down to the assaulted point, arriving just in time to see the fleting outlaws disappear in the chapparel. While the charge was being made at the lower end of the line, a furious artillery and muskerly fite was being kept up on the upper forts, but without effecting anything. Fully 1,000 men were led against these forts. The forts maintained a heavy fire upon the outlaws and maintained a heavy fire upon the outlaws, and kept them at a respectful distance. An Impe-rial cavalry force went up to see how things were, and where so much smoke came from, out seeing the situation of affairs, with Mejia ai heir head, they dashed into the forts and put he enemy to flight, taking from them one piece Genius! The pulses thrill with the word, and the soul does involuntary homage to the God-like attribute. The world applauds it; from the the glory and gladness of companionship to the namby-pamby school girl who knows it only as a claim to distinction, and thinks it "perfectly splendid," with about as much idea of her expression's meaning as of the subject disseed. Then there are young men of romantic endencies and imperfect physical developente, whose "weak flavor of genius spoils the grand neutrality of a commonplace character as wire-glass rinsings spoil a draught of pure water," and whose overweening vanity makes m mieauthropic because the world does not recognize their claim to distinction, and passes m more contemptuously than if they were less aspiring. This contempt they term envy. Honest, wholesome criticism they imagine illnature; and healthful struggling in life's broad rena for humble gains they snear at as vulgar the poetry of some faint sweet skimmering star-beams of fancy, and lose the vigor monhood, bugging nureal dreams and wishing there is never a fulfillment. Not possing sufficient gentus to force the world's acknowledgment, but having withal an ambition bet craves applause and is satisfied to do nothing without reward, they dream and mope their lives away while the golden bours are pess. With the helpless, the starving, the disseed "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the one-a thorn by the way side, and a ided memory in every heart they enter. Yet gaily in the breeze; while various mottoes re and censorious, when, in truth, the fault is Great was born in Wautage in the year 849. aside with a smile and a sneer selves, in the day of reckoning, no beautiful and least, ye have done it unto Me." In every rela-tion in life they are a failure—a shadow over the they foncy the world envious and unappreciative glass rinsings of genius" that spoils the clear raught of success and makes the world that do not meau envy, but simply an meet contempt, a genuine disgust, an irrepressible disapproval. So the young with more ambitiou than ability, B. F. BEAUMONT, President, W. P. HUME, Cashler, finds his whole life a failure, unless hapiy comdash to the ground his rose-colored vanities of sudden and overpowering distinction, and fill again life's goblet with the clear draught of steady purpose and noble effort, even though it be in ever so humble a sphere, and accomplish seemingly so little. Not the fame-trump and the laurel-wreath that mark always the true hero. Not the verdict in heaven and upon earth that always agree. Not man's account and God's account that always balance. Not the world's applause that will compensate or stand in lieu of true merit; therefore, O dreamer, come out of your selfish egotism, your vain cravings for a distinction you cau merit, and work to accomplish something, be that something ever so trifling and obscure. It is not for fame's tinkling cymbal alone that God created you. The aim is too poor, the mark too low. The arrow of your soul may speed higher-may pass the world's painted mark and cleave the shining heights of nobler efforts. Humanity has work for you. At home, abroad, anywhere, everywhere that your lot may be cast, you have a mission to do, a glorious birthright of labor and ritage of reward. Do your duty, your whole duty, and the harvest of your realization will aurely come. Even were your nature capable of desiring nothing grander and higher than fame, remember that even that will come sooner or later if you desire it. The world may be deaf and dumb and blind for a long time. You may struggle through days of toil and nights of exhaustion. The stars in Hope's horizon may wane until your soul gropes about in the dark-ness of a despair more terrible than death, yet ne day the world, cold and heartless and jeer ing as it may seem, will crown your efforts with just what they deserve. Remembering this, waste no time in dreams nor misanthropy, but labor to merit, and you will certainly receive accordingly. If you have not genius, but only aspiration, not the eternal fountain of poetry. t only the burning thirst, be not discouraged. but be content with such as you have, and make the best of it. Genius is grand and glorious, and the world honors it. It is a century-plant of wondrous bloom and beauty, yet even under the deathless fragrance of its glowing petals hides a orn, and deep, deep into the poor qui ering human heart, wearing the immortal crown of genius, presses this relentless thorn. A thorn? you ask; you who do not understand me; you who desire genius and have it not; you still farther, until he reaches the summit of fancy's asure mountain-tops. Yet, reveling in the glory and freedom of attainment, the hu-man heart longs for companionship. The shouts of the adoring world come up eager and fame-breathings, yet the affectious have been forgotten in ambition's flight, and with hungry clamor they plead for sustenance, not for the cloud-glory of genius nor the tinkling cymbal of coplance, but for love's sweet, satisfying morsel. And the aspirant, unable to escape the importualty of heart-hunger, must leave the grandeur of his solitude, the opaline splendors on the and thrill sweeping his features and translating white pinions he leaves the dusty highway of glory-crowned mountains of his genius, and go down in the valleys where flitting, wayward visions woo and win him with sweet dreams of companionship. Dizzy with thirst, weak with hunger, and blind with desire, he hears in the valley some feeble song of homage, some sparrow-note of welcome, some puny appeal to his starved affections, and with avidity he seizes the opportunity. He bends his coul's eagle wife sees him from afar, but his ecstasy is wholly unjutelligible to her. The world's applause pleases and gratifies, and she is glad to have an eagle husband because the sound of fame is pleasant to her, and not because he ments that she can understand and rejoice over.

No, no-if he were a monkey and attracted a crowd, she would be equally satisfied. Any claim upon the world that satisfied her vanity would do equally well. And so, when the eagle husband, after calling her in vain npward comes down to the common place, he finds her filled with silly vanity, that he has soared so far glory-ward, but totally nnable to catch with him over the maddening revel he has enjoyed. There is no mystery of the spirit's infinite crowning her forehead and lliuming her eyes and inspiring her speech; she does not catch his thought and carees it and answer it and return it to him glorified by contact with a kindred thought; she only sits a tiny sparrow in the great void of his heart, and does not even realize how far she comes from filling that heart. Once in a great while her little wings

s an eagle with glorious capacities and enjoy-and desperation, drives him to excesses, and and then the bruised, broken wings, bloodstained with reckiese crimes, are held up to the world. The world thinks it was the eccentricits of genius that prompted the erratic flight and the terrible downfall to destruction. They know nothing of the importunate heart that, aching, starving, dving for companionship, drove him mad with its cries and seu; him headlorg over the precipice of crime, where he neanely searches in the darkness of sin's abysa for the companionship he failed to find along the shining heights of his soul-flights. This is genius; while mediocrity, with its sparrowmate, is never alone in the humble vale of its capacity, but, satisfied, desiring nothing unattained, it lives and dies among the simple laisles of its aspirations; and if it has no wreath upon its brow, ueither has it a relent-less thorn hidden in its vitals and goading it to
